PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 7.—A bright sun and a cloudless sky, with a cool wind sweeping across the fields, greeted the thousands who straggled here last night to attend today's annual battle between Princeton and Yale. After a week of worry, forcing a week end, which would hinder the Tigers' famous offensive game under the new tactics, the coaches, staff, and other graduates and their supporters looked a healthy sign of relief when the bright dawn

GOVERNOR IN HUNT

Chief Executive of Maine Now
Directs Chase of Minot

ROCKLAND, Nov. 7.—Governor Warren T. Cohen today started out in person to take charge of the search for Minot St. Clair Francis, the negro schoolboy who has thus far eluded the various parties that have been in pursuit of him.
It is believed that before starting the militia of the State will be sent to run the escapee's pursuit and take him dead or alive. The Governor and Adjutant-General Francis are expected to start on their way this afternoon.

THE STADIUM. Soldiers Field, Nov. 17.—Under a cloudless canopy of blue, and in an air that brought roses to the cheeks of the girls and set the red blood rushing through the veins of all enthusiasts of the pigskin arena, a crowd estimated at 20,000 people gathered here this afternoon to watch the struggle between those old-time rivals, Harvard and Dartmouth.

As the hour for the opening of the gridiron contest grew near, from every direction came picturesque streams of brightly bedecked humanity, headed for the gates of the big amphitheater. The atmosphere vibrated with enthusiasm. The crimson of Harvard blazed in flags and banners and in silks and sashes.

But do not get the idea for a fleeting moment that crimson was the only color that caught the gleam of the golden sun—there was the green of the young athletes from Hanover flashing here and there, waved by about as lively and lusty a contingent of rooters as ever came from the snowed hills of old New Hampshire. Judging from the throng that came with the Dartmouth warriors there were not enough residents left at home to run down a fox.
It was announced by a man who had been 2,000 yards of the game sold at Hanover and it is believed that a large

QUOTATIONS FROM MRS. HERBERT PARSONS'S BOOK ADVOCATING TRIAL MARRIAGES.

"It would therefore seem well, from this point of view, to encourage trial marriage, the relation to be entered into with a view to permanency, but with the privilege of breaking it if proved unsuccessful, and in the absence of offspring, without suffering any great degree of public condemnation."

"Might it not be worth while, in our present divorce law experimentation, to discriminate between childless divorce-seekers and divorce-seekers with children, making the law much stricter for the latter than the former?"

TRIAL MARRIAGES ADVOCATED BY NEW YORK SOCIETY WOMAN

STRIKING IDEAS MRS. PARSONS'S BOOK

Daughter of Banker Henry Clews Advances Interesting Theories.

MATRIMONIAL WHITE LIST

By Boston American Licensed Writer.
NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—That "trial marriages with a view to permanency" would tend to the betterment of the human race, is one of the salient views of Mrs. Hilda Clews Parsons, daughter of Henry Clews, the banker, and wife of Congressman Herbert Parsons, in her new book, "The Family," published yesterday by G. P. Putnam Sons.

Mrs. Parsons, who holds the degree of doctor of philosophy and who was for six years a lecturer on sociology at Harvard College, handles the social question in the most candid manner in this volume, which she has written as a text book for college students and for home reading circles. Her attitude is to be entered into with a view to permanency, but with the privilege of breaking it if proved unsuccessful, and in the absence of offspring, without suffering any great degree of public condemnation.

The trial marriage, as suggested by her, is a union in which each party is free to break it at any time and for any reason. At the same time, if the union is permanent, it is as permanent as any other. If for any of the minor reasons Mrs. Parsons enumerates the book and wife do not best to part, they may do so without any stigma, without the interference of the courts. The author favors also the removal of legal restrictions upon either man or woman so divorced from marriage.

Says Marriage Is No Sacrament.
But the advocate of trial marriage is not only one of the radical views held by Mrs. Parsons in this remarkable book, which is expected to cause wide discussion and criticism. She believes the entire plan of marriage and cohabitation should be changed. She does not hold that marriage is a sacrament. Of this she says:

"The degree that marriage is an unchangeable sacrament, and the degree that it is a mere contract, is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

From Mrs. Parsons's point of view marriage is purely intended to show future society and the best possible intellectual and physical, moral and intellectual condition of the race. At the very start that marriage should be a union of two people, a man and a woman, who are free to break it at any time and for any reason. At the same time, if the union is permanent, it is as permanent as any other. If for any of the minor reasons Mrs. Parsons enumerates the book and wife do not best to part, they may do so without any stigma, without the interference of the courts. The author favors also the removal of legal restrictions upon either man or woman so divorced from marriage.

On a Matrimonial "White List."
A famous remark made by the author in the book is to place upon a matrimonial "white list," she says.

After recommending "early trial marriage," she says:

"Much depends upon the present experiments in economic independence for women, a matter which is the subject of much discussion. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

Children Chief Factor in Divorce Law.
Taking up the question of divorce, she declares that the existence of children should be a large determining factor in the law in granting or withholding a decree, she says:

"In no modern law on divorce, with one or two exceptions, is it wise to suggest taking as a determining factor, the existence of children. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

BOSTON FROWNS ON NEW MARRIAGE IDEA
Mrs. Hilda Clews Parsons's suggestion of "early trial marriage" is in her new book on "The Family," failed to find approval in Boston. The local press, the local society, lawyers, doctors, clergymen and business men have all been denouncing it. People of prominence who have discussed the Parsons idea with Mrs. Parsons, have expressed their disapproval of it. They have these things to say about it.

SAMUEL L. ELDER, Lawyer.
"I think that the suggestion of trial marriages is altogether in the extreme. When you bring marriage down to a mere social transaction and propose trial marriages and cohabitation, you are taking away from it its sacredness and its power to uplift the community and better the race. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

MRS. ELSIE CLEWS PARSONS, WHO PROPOSES TRIAL MARRIAGES.

Mrs. Parsons is the daughter of Henry Clews, millionaire and famous banker. She is a young woman student of sociological problems, and has won a position of authority as a lecturer in Harvard College.

of divorce than upon irresponsible husband or wife.

As to Childless Marriage.
The suggestion that may be raised against such a twofold divorce law is that it would encourage voluntarily childless marriages. Let us remark in this connection that the voluntary childless marriage is to-day in an indication of a real and serious trend toward future marriage.

"Voluntarily childless marriages," the restriction of childbearing to the birth of one or two children, a much more general condition, and one, too, that seems to be on the increase. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

The training of girls of all economic classes in the care of young children and a system of State supervision of the home, which is a subject of much discussion, is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

Julia Ward Howe Combats Idea of Trial Marriages
I do not agree with Mrs. Parsons and the ideas of "trial marriages" as suggested in her book on "The Family."

I have no doubt that many persons will find forward now and speak against the book. I have not read the book. Until I do, I can say nothing further in detail in the way of commenting on the author's views.—Statement made to the BOSTON AMERICAN today by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.

REV. DR. GEORGE W. BICKNELL, noted lecturer and traveler:
"With the American idea of today, the tendency of the American people, the constant desire for a change, the feeling of constantly getting 'stuck' of something, trial law will be a most dangerous thing."

REV. DR. THOMAS VAN NESS, Pastor Second Church in Boston:
"It would prove utterly useless. It would prove worse than good. In fact, it was tried many years ago in India, and it has proved utterly useless."

FREDERICK W. DALLINGER, Cambridge, former State Senator:
"The suggestion is foolish. It isn't worth the trouble. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

REV. P. S. HENSON, of past of Tremont Temple:
"The proposition is simply outrageous. It is a matter of degree. The fact that property holders are both parties to a contract is a matter of degree."

Startling Proposals as to Marriage in Mrs. Herbert Parsons's New Book

THAT trial marriages, to be terminated by law without humiliation to either party, would tend to the uplifting and betterment of humanity.

That men should be held to as strict a moral accountability as women, or else women be allowed the same latitude as men.

That special public school teachers or the school nurses should have the power to supervise and to a certain extent direct the home training of children in public schools and of children below school age.

That divorced persons should not be prohibited from remarriage but divorce should be made harder for parents who have children.

That it would be well to have embodied in the marriage license data concerning the personal health and character of the bride and bridegroom, as well as a certificate of the bride's previous training in the care of children.—Points in Mrs. Parsons's new book on marriage.

ARBITRATORS' DELAY COSTS CITY $33,500 GIRL ACCUSED OF GILLETTE OF DEATH THREATS TO ARRAIGN STANDARD OIL MEN MONDAY

Appointed August 31 to Act on Excessive Prices Charged for Municipal Lighting.

Letters from Grace Brown to Be Used by Prosecution in Trial on Death Charge.

Ohio Officials of Trust to Plead to Indictments at Findlay.

By the delay of two months and sixteen days today on the part of the arbitrators appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald and the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, the city of Boston is the loser at least $33,500 a day of $12,500 a month, or $33,500 in all for the seventy-eight days, including today.

The arbitrators, Samuel H. Hildes, for the Edison company, and John W. Hildes, for the city, were appointed August 31, but have not yet given the third arbitrator provided for by the contract or taken any action upon the question.

Decision to Be Final.
The decision of the three arbitrators as to whether the city is paying an excessive price for its electric street lights is final. Based on the testimony of experts and upon the prices which other large municipalities are paying for the same service, the price of $12,500 per year for the city is $24,000 too high. This money is the money by which the city is to be paid for the electric street lights. Based upon the figure at which the Edison company supplies the city to the municipal city of Somerville, $110 per light per year, the city is the loser every month arbitration is delayed.

Promises Action.
Samuel H. Hildes says that the third arbitrator will be appointed within a few days, and that they will get down to work. He has no doubt that many persons will find forward now and speak against the book. I have not read the book. Until I do, I can say nothing further in detail in the way of commenting on the author's views.—Statement made to the BOSTON AMERICAN today by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.

EAST VS. WEST MEET FRANKLIN FIELD

The Quaker City last night began to take on the appearance of a big late-winter affair. Out in West Philadelphia the athletes held a big mass meeting, at which speeches were made, songs rendered and cheers practiced. About 100 Michigan students predominated the central part of the city, being accompanied by a big team of athletes.

An Editorial
for Office Boys

And for the Men That Employ Them

It is an interesting novelty, and it MAY do good.

A concern has been organized for the purpose of training office boys.

The idea is to give them elementary instruction in conduct, business methods, etc.

However, many tens of thousands of office boys are now hard at work, or others will soon go to work, without ever seeing or hearing much about the Office Boys' School. So we write this editorial for the office boys of the present and the future, AND FOR THOSE THAT EMPLOY THE OFFICE BOYS.

Every grown man who has under him the direction and control of a young boy should feel every day the responsibility that is put upon him. The great hope of this day is THE YOUNG MIND.

It starts out free from the prejudices and limitations of older people. It can be made to do GOOD work under good direction; it can be destroyed under bad direction.

A man able to direct and inspire youth, whether he be the school teacher, or the individual parent in the home, or the employer making a utility of the CHEAPNESS OF YOUNG LABOR, should feel constantly impelled to do the best possible work with the raw material in his charge.

Every employer of an office boy should encourage such a boy to LIVE, to THINK and to READ wisely and methodically.

The lad should, of course, have discipline, regularity, attention to duty impressed upon him, BUT THE ORDERS SHOULD ALWAYS BE ACCOMPANIED BY EXPLANATIONS OF THE GOOD EFFECT THAT EARNEST, REGULAR WORK HAS UPON THE CHARACTER.

To the boys themselves we would say this:

All that you are ever going to be in your life DEPENDS ON THE WAY YOU WORK NOW.

You know the saying, "The boy is father to the man." This means that the boy's CHARACTER, the boy's HONESTY, the boy's good work and his ambition are the things that settle HOW MUCH THE FUTURE MAN WILL AMOUNT TO.

Boys, you can be quite sure that if you are second-rate office boys YOU WILL BE SECOND-RATE MEN.

You can be positive that if you are shuffling and lazy and indifferent in your present work, as men YOU WILL NOT BE VERY HIGHLY THOUGHT OF.

All the good work we do in this life depends chiefly UPON HABIT. If we get into the habit of being regular, THAT HABIT STICKS ALL OUR LIVES. If we get into the habit of doing a thing right away, instead of putting it off, THAT HABIT STICKS ALL OUR LIVES.

If you office boys make it a rule to do PROMPTLY what you know you ought to do it will make you more successful men.

It is important also to get the habit of being clean and polite. In this world our success depends a great deal upon WHAT OTHERS THINK OF US.

Without devoting too much time or money to mere looks, you must realize that a man who is clean always, who is neatly dressed in accordance with his means, who shows respect for himself, WILL HAVE THE RESPECT OF OTHER PEOPLE.

And the boy or the man who doesn't respect HIMSELF enough to be clean, and polite, and prompt, will not have from OTHERS the respect that he does not show for himself.

Boys of TO-DAY, you ought to realize that you come into this world at a very lucky time. There are thousands of new discoveries that give new possibilities to human beings. There is a great demand for new ideas, for the quick, alert, modern type of young man.

In former days what was wanted was a slow, dull creature, that could shout, "Gee! Haw!" at a pair of oxen. Now they want a quicker mind that can manage a big, powerful automobile. It is better to be born in the age of the automobile than in the age of the yoked oxen.

The successes that are open to the young of the future will far eclipse those of the men of to-day. There will even be, probably, greater MONEY successes for those that care about money—although mere money should not be the ambition of any plucky-spirited boy.

The office boy should make up his mind to GET ENOUGH MONEY, because without that life is one long worry. Every young boy should learn economy. But, while he thinks of saving up what he can, he must remember THAT EVERY DOLLAR SPENT FOR HIS FAMILY, FOR HIS MOTHER, OR HIS YOUNGER BROTHERS AND SISTERS, IS WORTH A HUNDRED DOLLARS SELFISHLY PUT IN THE BANK FOR HIMSELF.

The great things that a boy needs are GOOD HABITS, QUICKNESS AT WORK, POLITENESS IN HIS MANNERS, WHICH WILL BRING HIM CHANCES IN THE FUTURE. Get those good habits now as a boy, and you will have no difficulty in getting the money you need later on as a man.

Make it a practice especially, boys, to be REGULAR IN YOUR LIFE. Try to get up always at an early hour, so as to give yourselves time to get your breakfast, to dress yourselves decently and get to work promptly.

Remember THAT IF YOU GET UP EARLY YOU MUST GO TO BED EARLY.

Unless you sleep at least nine hours every night and eleven or twelve hours Saturday night your strength will not develop, your bodies and your brains will not be well supplied with the blood they require, AND AS A MAN YOU WON'T AMOUNT TO MUCH.

Do you know why so many of the little country boys come to the city and take away the great prizes, becoming presidents of railroads and Presidents of the nation?

It is because in the country the lights are out EARLY, the house hold gets up early, AND THE BOYS GO TO SLEEP ALMOST WITH THE CHICKENS. That makes them strong, vigorous, and when they are men THEY HAVE A GREAT ADVANTAGE OVER THE CITY BOY WHO HAS BEEN STANDING ON THE CORNER IN THE ELECTRIC LIGHT, WASTING THE HOURS OF SLEEP, WHEN HE SHOULD HAVE BEEN IN BED.

This is enough of a lecture for the office boys for one day.

1. STRANGER—Mr. Mark, a man will probably call on you to-day and offer you ten shares of Dumpendep Mining Stock for one hundred dollars a share. Now, Mr. Mark, I should very much like to get these ten shares, but this man is an enemy of mine and will not sell to me.

2. STRANGER—So, if you will purchase this stock at one hundred, I will return later and buy it from you at TWO hundred per share. MR. E. Z.—Goodness me! This is just like finding money. All right, sir; you come back later in the day, and if the man comes in I'll buy his stock.

2. SECOND STRANGER—The reason I offer this stock to you at such a low figure, Mr. Mark, is because I don't wish an enemy of mine to get it. MR. E. Z. (aside) or an enemy. (Aloud.) All right, sir, I'll take the stock. Here is your money.

Some Characteristics of French Women That Might Be Adopted to Advantage by Americans
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

It is said that American women are adaptable.

This is no doubt true of them so far as their ability to make themselves at home in all places and under conditions.

Nor is there a woman on earth who remains more essentially herself when away from her native land than the American.

In Europe I have met many of my countrymen who have lived for long periods of years abroad. Among them all I can find but one who had acquired the least semblance of mannerisms which are foreign.

And this chance to be one who had been but a brief time, comparatively speaking, away from her native American home.

One young woman, who had lived twelve years in Germany and two in France, I would have recognized as an American in any part of the world. Vois, manner, walk, all declared her nationality.

Still another, who has lived abroad fourteen years, and another twelve, and another ten, remain absolutely typical Americans.

The French woman in America is equally American.

It is a matter of temperament and inheritance, and can never be changed.

I for one, of course, Dutch and French, I would have recognized as an American in any part of the world.

Some women to lose their identity after many years in America, but I have never seen a French woman who has been so adaptable by her environment in strange lands.

French Repose
SPECIALLY impossible, it seems to me, for any one with Latin blood to be anything but Latin in the sense of atmosphere. I find my own countrymen always, I can see where they would be home by a blending of some of the qualities of the French.

Many cultured Frenchmen are aggressive and brusque, but I have never seen a French woman of the better class to whom these adjectives could be applied.

There is a certain indefinable softness and repose about her which is charming. However vivacious and witty she may be, she has a peculiar quality of mental repose.

She is, too, surrounded by an atmosphere of repose, about her which is an amulet.

With most all American women one certain alertness in their atmosphere, as if they were waiting for the moment when they were to go forth and do their duty.

The law applies to the French who calls upon you and to the little milliner who brings your hat. She has time to add you in adjusting it and to say many polite things about its becoming.

Good to Emulate
SHE may not be always sincere. One does not feel sincerely in the air of France. But one does feel the refinement of the French mind, its politeness of what it does not like and its absence of obtrusive curiosity.

All these qualities the American woman might emulate, while she maintained her native sincerity.

The young country has much to learn from older worlds. It ought to select whatever is admirable and adopt it as its own, while noticing the faults to avoid them.

Just as an American when abroad learns of other countries, a little more of other countries, a little more of the things which will embellish her home and person, and leaves the things which would be unsuited for her purposes, so she should select the qualities and habits which might add to her attractions.

A little more repose, a little more appreciation of what is not American, a little more modesty about vaunting one's own public, a little more attention to the manner, if you please, of the American woman traveler, and you have her, as she should be, distinctly American.

For to lose her native individuality would be the greatest of all calamities.
